Executive summary

The 'Diversity in the Whau Project' was established to assist the Local Board develop an Ethnic People's Plan (EPP) for the Whau that supports inclusion. In particular, it is intended that the EPP will support Ethnic communities to:

1. have better access to local services, facilities and programmes;
2. engage with the Local Board and wider council.

Project activities during the 'Diversity in the Whau' Project included:

1. Consultation with key ethnic stakeholders and identification of communities through interviews and workshops.
2. Production of a community-led ethnic people's plan which includes recommendations for implementation, including an action plan and next steps.
3. Production of a contact list and details of ethnic communities who participated in the project.

The project comprised of four phases:

1. Design phase: which included developing key questions for ethnic community groups based on the scope of project, inclusion and exclusion criteria and identifying hubs of activity in the Whau.
2. Surveying phase: which included surveying through face to face interviewing ethnic community groups and organisations collecting information on 1. Group characteristics 2. Experience of inter-ethnic interactions 3. Experience of utilising community facilities and programmes 4. Understanding and experience of Local Board 5. Experience of Auckland Council; and 6. Participation in Auckland wide events. Three key themes that arose from the results of the survey were used to guide the focus of workshops. These themes included: 1. partnership and collaboration 2. access and ownership and 3. ethnic leadership. A total of 41 people participated in the survey phase.
3. Workshop phase: which included inviting survey participants and the wider community to attend one of five two-hour workshops which were designed to 1. Share findings/key themes of surveying phase 2. Identify project ideas and plans to implement the Ethnic People Plan. The five workshops were held over a two-week period in New Lynn, Kelston, Green Bay and Blockhouse Bay. A total of 146 people representing a diverse range of ages and ethnicities participated in five workshops.
4. Recommendations and analysis phase: which included 1. developing the EPP for the Whau based on rapid thematic analysis of key themes from survey and workshop phase of project 2. Short, medium and long-term recommendations for implementation of The EPP.

The four overarching themes and focus areas of the Whau Ethnic Peoples Plan are:

1. Increase access to resources and support
2. Facilitate inter-ethnic cultural exchange
3. Increase participation and ownership of public space
4. Strengthen leadership

Recommendations for implementation of the Whau Ethnic People's Plan include:

Short-term recommendations:

1. Convene an ethnic leaders' workshop (complete)
2. Plan a 'Responding to diversity in the Whau' project follow-up workshop (in progress)
3. Develop a Local Board and ethnic people's engagement plan (in progress)
4. Develop an Ethnic people's community-led development forum

Medium-term recommendations:

1. Develop an ethnic youth identity arts project
2. Develop a 'Diversity in parks and open space needs assessment'
3. Mainstream inter-ethnic exchange activities

Long-term recommendations:

1. Support the development of an 'inclusion and diversity through sport tool kit'
2. Develop an information sheet of different options for accessing space

Background

The ways in which different ethnic communities utilise facilities and services is diverse. We still do not know as much as we would like to know about what is important to different cultures when it comes to engaging with council and the Local Board or their need for social and community facilities and programmes. The Whau is one of the most diverse Local Board areas in Auckland with the area likely to experience increasing diversity as a result of the planned: high density housing being built, particularly in the Avondale and New Lynn centres.

Whau Local Board Priorities

The Whau Local Board has identified context and place-specific priorities for its communities. Specifically, this project 'Responding to diversity in the Whau: An Ethnic People's Plan' is an initiative that stems from Outcome Two of the Whau Local Board Plan "Great neighbourhoods with strong community connections, capacity and voices" and under the objective that "our towns and neighbourhood communities are stronger". The project also aligns with the principals and focus areas of the wider Auckland Plan¹ and the focus areas of the Office of Ethnic Communities².

Project purpose

With the wider policy context in mind, the purpose of this project is to develop an EPP for the Whau that will support inclusion. In particular, the Plan will support Ethnic communities to:

1. have better access to local services, facilities and programmes
2. engage with the Local Board and wider council

Project activities

This project has:

1. Undertaken consultation with key stakeholders and identified groups through interviews and workshops.
2. Produced a community-led ethnic people plan which includes recommendations for implementation, an action plan and next steps.
3. Produced a contact list and details of ethnic communities who participated in the project.

¹ The Auckland Plan states that community development should be grassroots—driven, led and owned by communities themselves. The Auckland Plan 1. Supports community-led development and work with communities to develop leadership skills and capacity 2. Promotes inclusion, reduce discrimination and remove barriers to opportunity and participation, particularly for disadvantaged groups 3. Prioritises facilitation of Maori outcomes through a comprehensive and coordinated development programme.

² Informed by literature and social theory the National Office of Ethnic Communities has identified four key focus areas for its framework for its work programme. These are: 1. Growing knowledge and understanding of ethnic diversity and inclusion in New Zealand 2. Connecting people in ethnic communities to each other, wider society and government 3. Increasing active citizenship of people in ethnic communities 4. Valuing diverse cultures and ethnicities within communities, wider society and the nation.

Key definitions

For this project key definitions to based are below:

Ethnic

Ethnic refers to non Pakeha/European and Maori. Although Pacific peoples are thought to be close neighbours with a special connection to New Zealand some Pacific Peoples self-identified as being Ethnic and were part of groups with mixed ethnicities. For the purpose of this project, groups made up of mainly pacific peoples are excluded from the initial survey.

Community Groups

Community groups are defined here as three or more members with some form of shared goal. Groups who meet/used public space in the Whau will be included. Groups whose members have at least 50% Whau residence will be included. Groups or umbrella organisations who do not have any connection to the Whau Local Board area were excluded from the survey. Participants represented umbrella organisations, one or multiple community groups and individuals who work closely with ethnic community groups in the Whau.

Local Programmes

Local programmes refer to community-focused programmes that can be privately and publicly funded and targeted at a different age, gender and ethnic groups and include community-based programmes focused on sports, youth, elderly, health and wellness, cooking, craft, small business, women, children, mothers, religion, gardening, activism.

Local Facilities

Local facilities and services are both publicly and privately owned and include the following: libraries, local halls, community centres, parks, reserves, beaches, town squares, swimming pools, theatres, sports facilities, transportation services, fire, police, Community Advice Bureau, churches, temples, mosques.

Methodology

The project was undertaken over four phases including design, surveying, workshop and reporting phase. This approach is aligned with the empowered communities' approach of Auckland Council and supports the development of context-specific recommendations for a community led EPP.

Phase 1: Design phase

- In consultation with Auckland Council Staff strategy was developed for engagement including utilising known ethnic community groups and organisations contacts as point of entry.
- Developed key questions for ethnic community groups based on scope of project and in consultation with staff of Community Empowered Unit of Auckland Council.
- Identified inclusion and exclusion criteria.
- Identified hubs of community activity within the Local Board area.

Phase 2: Surveying phase

- Met with and surveyed through face to face interviews ethnic community groups and organisations.
- Collected participant perceptions on:
 1. Group characteristics
 2. Experience of inter-ethnic interaction
 3. Experience of utilising community facilities and programmes
 4. Understanding and experience of Local Board
 5. Experience of Auckland Council
 6. Participation in Auckland wide events
- Undertook initial sweep of data to identify key themes to workshop. At this stage of the project 41 people representing different community groups and organisations had been surveyed. After careful consideration three key themes were identified as most significant:
 1. Ethnic leadership
 2. inter-ethnic partnership and collaboration
 3. Access and ownership.
- It was identified that an additional workshop for 'Ethnic leaders' was needed to bring different ethnic leaders together to network and give their ideas for how to progress the EPP after its development.
- During this phase the project team engaged with the Parks, Sport and Recreation department at Auckland Council to incorporate Parks' needs as an added extra to other themes in workshops. This worked well as an initial survey finding suggested Parks and Open Space are significant for meeting the multiple needs and desires of the ethnic communities. A separate Parks needs-assessment with recommendations will be developed following the conclusion of the Responding to Diversity in the Whau Project.

Phase 3: Workshop phase

- Representatives of the community groups surveyed, and wider community invited to attend one of five two-hour workshops. The workshops were designed to:
 1. Share findings/key themes of survey with community groups
 2. identify key local project ideas and in the case of the Ethnic leader's workshop
- Identify community-lead ways to progress the Ethnic People's Plan.

Phase 4: Recommendations and analysis

- A contact list of participants and groups they represent put into a excel spreadsheet for future use by Local Board.
- Through analysis of data from survey and workshops, identify significant themes for the Whau EPP.
- Short, medium and long-term recommendations and action plan for implementing the EPP identified.
- A short video capturing the project process, community workshops and key findings developed and delivered.

Survey Results

The survey had six components which included:

1. Group characteristics
2. Experience of inter-ethnic interaction
3. Experience of utilising community facilities and programmes
4. Understanding and experience of Local Board
5. Experience of Auckland Council
6. Participation in Auckland wide events

A total of 41 people from different groups were surveyed. Participants were connected to diverse ethnic groups and suburbs across the Whau Local Board area. A summary of results by section is below. For full list or results breakdown by question see appendix 1 (p26.)

NOTE: It is important to note that although this project had diverse participation it does not necessarily represent of all ethnic people or groups within the Whau.

Group characteristics

The groups surveyed were very diverse. Approximately half the groups surveyed had most members from the same ethnic group and the other half had members from mixed ethnic groups. Participants identified a total of 34 different ethnic groups represented in their group(s). Chinese and Indian ethnic groups were the most common ethnic groups identified by participants. Interestingly, 39% of the groups interviewed had over 100 members. Over half of the people surveyed said that their groups were mostly balanced between male and female. However, a significant 20% of the groups were mostly female.

Approximately half of the groups surveyed said their group had mixed-age members. There were no groups identified by participants with most members between the ages of 25-34 or over 75. This is not surprising as the 25-34 age group are usually time poor and over 75-year age group are usually part of groups that have younger members in late 60s and early 70s.

Over 80% of the participants are part of groups that have been meeting for over two years. The most common key group activities were around:

1. providing support;
2. sport and exercising; and
3. socialising and networking.

Meeting to participate in creative activities, to learn about faith/ religion and preserving culture and language were also commonly identified.

Experience of inter-ethnic interaction

Most groups surveyed mix and collaborate with Pakeha/European groups; 29% of groups said they mixed or did activities with Maori groups; 71% of the participants said they mixed or did activities with ethnic groups other than Pakeha/European and Maori.

For those groups who did mix or do activities with other ethnic groups it was through:

1. faith support groups;
2. retreats and talks;

3. sporting activities; and
4. festival and events.

For those participants who said their group did not mix with or do activities with other ethnic groups the key reasons were:

1. that the purpose of the group was to preserve culture/language;
2. that they were consumed with their own activities; and
3. language difficulty.

NOTE: Important to note is that all participants expressed a willingness and interest in interacting more with other ethnic groups.

Experience of utilising community facilities and programmes

Most participants had utilised community facilities. The most common was through community centres, houses and hubs. Sports halls and gyms were also commonly utilised. Schools, libraries, Churches/mosques, parks and beaches are other facilities that were identified by participants.

Thirteen participants reported not experiencing any barriers to utilising community facilities. Of the participants who did experience barriers they were due to:

1. problems with accessing space;
2. the booking systems; and
3. cost.

Two participants felt racist/obstructive attitudes was a barrier for them.

When asked what opportunities they have had to participate in local community programmes six participants responded with none. For those that had opportunities, their answers were diverse. However, environment-related opportunities such as planting days were mentioned more than once as were festivals and health and wellness programmes.

When asked what barriers they had experienced in participating in local programmes eight participants said none. Of the barriers identified the most common ones included:

1. timing of programmes;
2. groups focused inward not open to others;
3. not knowing what's available; and
4. language barriers.

Understanding and experience of Local Board

Seventy percent of the participants knew who the Local Board are. The participants also had a good understanding of the role of the Local Board in their community. A high percentage of participants have voted in the local elections. Of the participants that had not voted the reasons were:

1. because they didn't know who they were;
2. they didn't think it was relevant;
3. they had not been in the area long enough; and
4. didn't know about it.

More than half of the participants had never attended a Local Board meeting however 65% said they had given feedback on local board plans or issues. The most common motivation for giving feedback was trying to make improvements. Most participants said they would like to give feedback on Local Board Plans and priorities. Participants identified not knowing how to engage with their Local Board as the most common barrier to engagement.

When asked what the best way for the Local Board to get their groups feedback on Local Board priorities and Plans the majority said through face to face meetings. Of the groups surveyed 62% had never received any Local Board funding.

NOTE: It is Important to note is that the Whau Local Board's strategic broker supplied the initial list of community contacts to survey. Therefore these results are likely represent a higher than normal understanding and engagement with Local Board amongst ethnic community groups.

Experience of Auckland Council

Eighteen participants said they had not engaged with other Local Council departments or staff other than Local Board. Of those who had engaged with other council departments, they were mainly through:

1. The community empowered unit
2. Community events
3. Parks
4. Community house staff
5. Libraries.

Participation in Auckland wide events

Twelve participants said they had not been part of any Auckland wide festival or events. Of those that had participated in an Auckland wide event, the most common was for lantern festival and Chinese New Year celebrations. Most participants said they would love to have more opportunities to participate in local and Auckland wide events or festival.

Workshop results

A total of five participatory workshops ran over a two-week period during phase three of the project. A total of 143 people of a diverse range of ages and ethnicities attended the workshops. The Ethnic Leaders workshop was an additional workshop organised in response to comments from participants during the surveying phase which identified a need to bring different ethnic groups together to meet and discuss how to continue to keep momentum going after this project came to an end.

Workshops ran for two hours and consisted of a short presentation outlining the purpose of the project and introducing the key themes that had arisen out of survey phase. Following this, participants were asked to write down on Post Its as many suggestions as they could for possible project ideas. Participants were then asked to organise them by sticking them on posters named with the key thematic categories that had come out of the survey phase. These thematic categories were:

1. Partnership and collaboration-projects that support partnership and collaboration between ethnic groups.
2. Access and ownership-projects that support ethnic communities to access and take ownership of community programmes and facilities.
3. Ethnic leadership- projects that strengthen ethnic people's leadership.

Participants were then asked to read all the project ideas displayed and select two or three projects that most excited them by ticking relevant Post Its. The project team then added the ticks and chose the projects with the most number of ticks for discussion.

Following this vetting process, the attendees were split up into three groups to work through the structure, potential barriers, and support needed to action the chosen projects.

A funding advisor from Auckland Council spoke at two of the workshops, introducing himself and explaining how groups can access Local Board funding as well as directing them to other funding resources.

During the last workshop with ethnic leaders next steps and succession planning was discussed. As well as providing ideas for an EPP and related projects, the workshops importantly provided an opportunity for networking and story-sharing between groups.

For full workshop reports by location see appendix 2 (p 48). For full list of project ideas generated from the workshops see appendix 3 (p 49). For rapid project plans generated at each workshop by location see appendix 4 (p 55).

Rapid thematic analysis of project themes

The breadth of engagement and data collected has highlighted multiple areas that are important to the Whau diverse ethnic communities. However, these have been necessarily condensed into four overarching focus areas. The focus areas were either identified by participants as something positive and important or from a significant challenge to inclusion.

Access to resources and support

Access is a key theme which has come up throughout the project. The participants highlight that ethnic communities can have difficulty accessing resources and support.

Access to resources

The ethnic communities that were engaged with as part of this project are generally well organised and manage and run their own programmes. However, many participants in this project said they needed help accessing affordable spaces to meet. Furthermore, they felt they did not have enough information on how to access funding to run their activities. As an initial response to this, need the project team asked the Whau Funding Advisor to attend some of the workshops to highlight opportunities for accessing the funding. A consistent comment from participants was that they would like to have less formal access to space. For example, to be able to turn up somewhere and use space without having to always pre-book.

Access to support

Highlighted throughout the project was the significant contribution that ethnic communities make to their own communities and within the wider community through volunteerism. The volunteer activities that ethnic communities represented in this project are involved in are diverse. Examples include: sports, creative arts, language teaching, youth programmes, women's programmes and community planting days. However, it was also clear through conversations with participants that they need more support to maintain their involvement in these activities and to further develop them. Participants also felt they needed a place to share information and connect with other community groups. Access to language support especially for seniors was commonly identified as important for health and wellbeing.

Participation and ownership of public spaces

Participation and ownership of public space consistently came up throughout the project as important for participant to feel included and valued.

Sense of Belonging

Participation and ownership of public spaces was identified by participants as contributing to a feeling of belonging. However, many participants felt that there was not enough opportunity to participate and take ownership of public space. One consistent challenge highlighted was that participants often felt unsure about utilising visibly public space for non-traditional activities. One example of this is being unsure where they were permitted to perform their dances and/or activities. Consistently participants said that activities for seniors, children, youth and women were especially important to support a sense of belonging. A challenge raised several times throughout the project was that public spaces did not cater enough to the religious and cultural needs of some ethnic communities. For example, some Muslim women feel they needed more women-only spaces and mentioned that in the past they could access a swimming pool that set aside a 'women only' swimming time. Important to note is that other non-religious ethnic participants also appreciated women-only spaces.

Recognition and opportunities to contribute

Ethnic community groups contribute significantly to the Whau Local Board area. There was a feeling from some participants that this was not always recognised or celebrated. Despite this, almost all participants expressed a desire for more opportunities to contribute to the wider community. Many commented that they needed more information on the ways they could contribute. Several project ideas from the workshops were around building fit-for-purpose spaces in parks to support inter-cultural exchange and subsequently support participation and ownership. Throughout the project, participants also identified challenges and opportunities related to local transport systems, parking and locations of sports centres. Contributing to any current or future urban design/development projects were identified as good opportunities for ethnic people to participate and take ownership of public space.

Inter-Ethnic Cultural Exchange

The Whau is becoming increasingly ethnically diverse. These ethnic communities have their own languages and unique cultural traditions. Some groups that participated in this project were of mixed ethnicities and felt that this was important for integration into New Zealand. Other groups meet for the purpose of preserving their own culture, language and religion. Some participants felt that there were racist attitudes that were a barrier to access local facilities and programmes. However the vast majority did not identify this as a significant issue. Inter-cultural exchange was a key theme in the workshops.

Health and wellbeing

Participation in groups whether it be mixed, or one ethnic group was shown consistently throughout the project, to be important for health and wellbeing. Participants in this project identified the opportunity that sports play in supporting inter-ethnic cultural exchange. Some participants would like to see more non-traditional sports available to ethnic communities as well as to the Pakeha, Maori and Pacific people. Green activities such as planting days were identified several times as a way to promote health and wellbeing and inter-ethnic exchange.

Understanding and respect

There was overwhelming openness and interest from ethnic communities towards sharing their own culture and traditions and learning about others. However, it is important to note that there was some degree of hesitation regarding how others would respond to them. Participants in this project showed that they were more likely to mix with Pakeha/European than Maori or Pacific however there was a strong interest to engage more with Maori groups. Important to note is that it is difficult for some religious ethnic people to participate in in traditional Maori welcoming because of customs that involve physical touch between men and women.

Ethnic people in leadership

Ethnic people's leadership was one of the themes of the workshop and identified throughout the engagement process. Participants felt that there needed to be more opportunity for ethnic leaders to engage/network and meet more with other leaders. Importantly participants also shared that there was very little shared understanding of what an 'ethnic leader' is across diverse cultural contexts. Moreover, participants felt that to support ethnic peoples into leadership starting a dialogue around 'what is an ethnic leader?' between and across different ethnic groups and generations.

Participants also raised the importance of recognising the current contributions of ethnic leaders. Representation of ethnic people on formal decision-making bodies and access to professional support and training was also highlighted by participants as important in supporting ethnic leadership. Children of migrants or the 1.5 generation were a specific group identified by participants as needing support into leadership roles.

The Whau Ethnic peoples Plan

The themes that have been identified through this project directly relate to the focus areas of the Whau EPP developed through this process. The recommended focus areas include:

1. Increase access to resources and support
2. Facilitate inter-ethnic cultural exchange
3. Increase participation and ownership of public space
4. Strengthen leadership

Recommendations for implementation of Whau Ethnic People's Plan

The recommendations below are to support implantation of the Whau EPP and necessary community activation. Although the EPP was developed within a community development context, it is intended as a tool to support all council staff, community groups and Local Board members working in the Whau to meet the needs of a growing and increasingly diverse ethnic community.

Short-term recommendations

1. Convene an ethnic leaders workshop (complete)

Through the engagement process, several participants expressed an interest to meet with other ethnic groups to network and discuss the project and next steps. The team responded to this by adding an extra workshop specifically for ethnic leaders. The workshop was well attended. Ethnic leaders from different community groups and organisations had the opportunity to contribute to the EPP, network with each other and give their thoughts on next steps.

2. Plan a responding to diversity in the Whau follow up workshop (in progress)

Invite community groups who participated in the Responding to diversity in the Whau project to:

1. hear about the findings of the project;
2. meet the Local Board; and
3. discuss next step.

This could be held at Local Board office one evening within the next three months.

3. Develop a Local Board and ethnic people's engagement plan (In progress)

Develop an engagement strategy specifically targeting ethnic communities to support ongoing dialogue between ethnic communities and the Local Board. Specifically, the engagement strategy to include:

1. an emphasis on face to face engagement;
2. opportunities for Local Board members to engage with ethnic communities to meet community groups in the environments in which they meet; and meet the Local Board; and
3. opportunities for ethnic communities to share with Local Board members their skills, talents and programmes discuss next step.

4. Initiate an Ethnic People's community-led development forum

Support the establishment of a regular ethnic people's community-led development forum. A small committee made up of participants of the Responding to Diversity in the Whau project to further develop a clear purpose, objectives and strategy for the forum including how it will support the implementation of the Whau EPP. This forum to be established in the Whau Local Board area but could potentially expand to include groups from other Local Board areas promoting cross-border partnership and collaboration. At the first meeting of the committee the group to also identify resources and support that are needed to establish the forum. Identify opportunities for seed funding within the Local Board and through other avenues such as wider Auckland Council or Office of Ethnic Communities.

Medium-term recommendations

1. Develop an ethnic youth identity arts project

Work with local high schools and youth organisations to develop an arts project that aims to increase awareness of the diverse experiences of ethnic youth. In particular, focusing on the experiences of holding dual or multiple identities. In particular, the project could focus on communication at home with families and with peers. The Arts project could then be exhibited across libraries and other public spaces.

2. Develop a diversity in parks open space needs assessment (in progress)

Throughout the initial survey and later through the workshops it became clear that parks play an important role in supporting ethnic communities to access, participate and take ownership of public space. The Parks department engaged with the project team early on in the project to develop a plan to utilise the planned workshops to develop a Diversity in Parks Needs Assessment for the Whau.

3. Mainstream inter-ethnic exchange activities

To mainstream inter-ethnic exchange, in particular, opportunities for ethnic communities to showcase their skills and talents through public performances. There are multiple ways in which this can be supported:

1. Where appropriate, future public engagement led by the Local Board or Auckland Council to include opportunities for ethnic communities to perform.
2. Work with council-run and non-council run sports providers and schools to support the mainstreaming of non-traditional sports such as table tennis or badminton.
3. Continue to support and encourage community facilities and hubs to run inter-cultural exchange workshops particularly through art and food exchange projects.
4. Promoting opportunities for intergenerational skill sharing and volunteerism in community facilities and hubs. This could include learning from other areas how the programmes have evolved and what has worked/not worked.
5. Identify opportunities for ethnic people to learn more about and experience Maori culture and customs in a way that feels culturally safe for them such as a woman-only experience for ethnic women to engage with women from a local marae.

Long-term recommendations

1. Support the development of a inclusion and diversity through sports tool kit

Sport can be an effective tool for inclusion and important for health and wellbeing. An inclusion and diversity through sports tool kit would help support local sports clubs and centres to engage with and support the needs of different ethnic groups. This tool kit could give examples of how to both support ethnic communities in participating in and experiencing traditional kiwi sports and provide non-ethnic communities opportunities to be involved in non-traditional sports.

2. Develop an information sheet of different options for accessing space.

Many participants said they struggled to find space or funds to pay for hire. However, many participants were unaware of the multiple options available. It would be useful to develop an information sheet on the diverse and alternative ways communities can access space. For example, information on the potential of accessing private spaces of religious centers, community houses and hub, parks or other community lease buildings and hubs.

Characteristics of a sustainable Ethnic People's Plan

Taking it forward, next steps

During the Ethnic leaders' workshop next steps for the project and the EPP were discussed. Firstly, the participants of the ethnic leaders' workshop wanted to acknowledge the Local Board for providing an opportunity to have their voices heard and be part of developing the EPP.

The feedback from participants during the discussion on the next steps was that the Local Board should continue to hold or act as a conduit for the implementation of the EPP. However, there was wide support for the formation of a committee or group that is made up of ethnic leaders to support its implementation. Participants of the workshop suggested working with other Local Boards to get cross-border partnership and collaboration action.

Important to note is that the ethnic leader participants acknowledged the need for partnerships across groups especially in relation to funding outcome or related projects. It was also suggested that seniors or young ethnic leaders take a lead on taking the EPP forwards. The action plan below takes the feedback of participants of the ethnic leaders' workshop into account.
